HE KEEPS COLUMBIA CHILDREN IN SCHOOL

Investigating Sanitary Conditions Also Part of I. M. Pennington's Work.

A NEW CITY OFFICER

Now Checking Up All Names in Effort to Round Up Truants.

"Oh, Skinnay, the truant man 'll getcha if ya don't watch out."

If any one of the 1,187 grade school children in Columbia deserts his books and slates for occupations more typical of the "days of real sport," J. M. Pennington, health and attendance officer of the Columbia public schools, knows it. He has a complete list of the children of school age and another list of all the children now attending grade schools. He is now comparing the two lists of names and in a few days will have the names of all children between the ages of 8 and 16 years, who are not attending school.

Then—watch out.

"Each one of these cases will be investigated by Mr. Pennington. If the truant is between the ages of 8 and 14 years his parents are required by law, under penalty of fine or imprisonment, to place the child in the public schools. Only those between 12 and 14 years who are steadily employed are exempted from school attendance.

The grown-ups also receive a large part of Mr. Pennington's attention. As city health officer it is the duty to see that Columbia yards and residences are kept in a sanitary condition, that weeds are cut and rubbish hauled away. The office of city health officer was created by the city council, June 16 and Mr. Pennington, attendance officer for four years, was appointed to take charge of the new office.

Believes in Health Education.

"I believe in a campaign of education instead of compulsion to solve the health problem in Columbia," he says. "I find that those who have been convinced of the need of sanitation through argument and education will continue to keep Columbia in a healthful state long after those who were forced by law to do so have returned to their old ways. 'Since I began this work a short time ago, I can already see a change in the attitude of Columbia people toward the health and sanitation movement. I never try to force people into cleaning up the insanitary spots in Columbia but always do my best to leave them in a good humor and in sympathy with the movement.

"The popular tendency is to overlook one's own insanitary premises and see only the faults of his neighbor. However, this tendency is easily overcome by choosing some unusually well kept home in the neighborhood and commenting upon it. In this manner, those whose homes are not as tidy as they should be are given a pattern to go by improving their own homes.

Sanitation Begins at Home.

"If charity begins at home, sanitation does also and it is this personal element in the home upon which I am basing my campaign for a healthier and more sanitary Columbia."

The Civic League of Columbia has aided in making Columbia a better place to live in by appealing to the general public. Mr. Pennington's work supplements that of the Civic League by personally visiting those portions of the city which are in need of improvement and educating the inhabitants in better modes of living. His visits amount to little more than friendly calls, and the person called on does not realize that he is being "educated" until it is all over and he has been convinced of the error of his ways.

One convert in the health campaign means another. Each one who is induced to clean up his property immediately notices that the yard of his next neighbor is not what it should be and straightway starts on a campaign of his own.

Mr. Pennington has converted each day into a "Clean-up Day" and each morning finds a long list of places which he must visit during the day.

Columbia Girl Joins Theatrical Company

MISS Aldeah Wise, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Wise of 301 West Broadway, Columbia, is touring the New England states and Canada with the Henry W. Savage production of "Everywoman." She is understudy to "Modesty" and one of the group of girl attendants to "Everywoman." The company left New York early in September.

Miss Wise was graduated from the Columbia High School, the department of expression of Christian College, the Morse School of Expression of St. Louis and was enrolled in the College of Arts and Science of the University the first semester of last year. She has taken part in a number of plays given by Columbia schools and colleges. Columbians will remember her especially as "Viola" in "Twelfth Night," the commencement play of the 1914 graduating class of the Columbia High School.

Before leaving this summer for New York where she obtained the position she now holds, Miss Wise was with a stock company in Joplin for several weeks.

Her sister, Miss Dorothy Wise, is a senior in the University.
